

Angkor Ban, Kampong Cham Province, Cambodia

A living time capsule on the Mekong — Angkor Ban's century-old wooden houses and unhurried village rhythms survived war, revolution, and floods. It's one of the most authentic stops on any river cruise.

-  Tender (small local boats)
-  Typical call: 3–5 hrs
-  USD & Cambodian Riel
-  Khmer
-  Rural village — no tourist shops

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

- Cash only, no ATM. Bring USD in small bills ($1, $5) or Cambodian Riel. USD is widely accepted in Cambodia. There is nowhere to exchange money in the village.
- Dress modestly. Shoulders and knees should be covered, especially when visiting the temple. Lightweight linen is ideal for the heat and humidity.
- Wet season (June–October) = muddy paths. Sturdy closed-toe shoes are essential year-round; sandals will not serve you on unpaved village tracks.
- Don't expect souvenir shops. Angkor Ban is a living village, not a tourist market. A few locals may sell woven crafts — buying directly supports families.
- Ask before photographing people. Villagers are welcoming, but a gesture and a smile before raising your camera goes a long way.
- Short call — use every minute. Most ships stop for only 3–4 hours. Stick with your guide and don't wander far; tender schedules are firm.
