KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

- Tram D is the independent travel key. Kehl Bahnhof and Kehl Rathaus connect directly with central Strasbourg; buy and validate your ticket before boarding.
- Berths vary. Kehl-side docks are greener, while some Strasbourg berths are closer to tram access but more industrial. Check your ship's daily sheet before setting off.
- Build in a return buffer. Leave central Strasbourg at least 60-90 minutes before all-aboard if traveling independently, especially during Christmas markets.
- One currency, two countries. Germany and France both use euros, and cards are common, but coins are handy for tram machines, lockers, and small purchases.
- Sunday is quieter in Kehl. German shops often close on Sundays; Strasbourg's tourist core has more activity, but hours still vary.
- Eat on the border. Strasbourg is the better bet for Alsatian winstubs, while Kehl is easy for German bakeries, beer, and pharmacy stops before sailing.
