

Sóller, Mallorca, Spain

Tucked into a sheltered bay at the foot of the Serra de Tramuntana, Port de Sóller trades on orange groves, a vintage tramway, and one of Mallorca's prettiest mountain towns — all within easy reach of the pier.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

- Tram timing matters. The tram runs roughly every 30 minutes from Port de Sóller. If multiple ships are in port, the queue at the tram stop fills fast — head there soon after tendering ashore.
- Bring euros in cash. Tram tickets (around €8 each way) are often paid onboard, and small vendors in Sóller market and some cafés prefer cash. There are ATMs in Sóller and a couple in Port de Sóller.
- Buy the oranges. Sóller's valley oranges and locally pressed olive oil are genuinely excellent and easy to pack. Saturday market is the best spot; otherwise check the town shops on Carrer de sa Lluna.
- Beach chairs cost extra. Platja d'en Repic rents sun loungers; budget €10–15 for a set. The beach is free to use without one.
- Summer heat is real. July–August temperatures regularly exceed 30 °C. Carry water, wear sunscreen, and plan strenuous walks or hikes in the morning.
- Palma is 30 km away. Doable by taxi (≈€40 each way) or the vintage train, but factor travel time — it eats into a standard port call if you want to see both Sóller and Palma.
