

Třebenice (Slapy), Bohemia, Czech Republic

A quiet river landing on the Vltava just below the Slapy Dam where historic Prague steamboats tie up long enough for passengers to hike wooded river bluffs, visit a century-old tramp pub, and watch herons work the shallows.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

- Cash only at the pub. Hospoda U Taterů operates on CZK cash. There are no ATMs at the landing or in the small village. Stock up in Prague before boarding.
- Short stop — stay near the boat. Lay-time at Třebenice is typically under 2.5 hours. The steamboat will leave on schedule. Set a phone alarm and stay within easy walking distance of the pier.
- Wear sturdy shoes. The forest paths to the viewpoint are steep, rocky, and can be muddy or icy depending on season. Flip-flops are fine for the pub; proper shoes are essential for hiking.
- Bring a layer. The Vltava valley creates its own micro-climate — it can be noticeably cooler and windier at the river level than in Prague.
- Check the pub's days. Hospoda U Taterů is closed Monday–Wednesday and draws large crowds on summer weekends, when the steamboat also calls. Shoulder-season visits (May, Sept) are calmer.
- Prague Steamboats book early. The historic steamboat Vltava (a Czech cultural monument) sells out weeks in advance in summer. The all-inclusive Slapy cruise includes a stop here — book directly at praguesteamboats.com.
